and Peter Jonkers.

Description: First. | Washington, D.C. : The Council for Research in Values and Philosophy, [2023] | Series: Cultural heritage and contemporary change. Series VIII, Christian philosophical studies ; volume 24 | Includes bibliographical references and index. | Summary: "In the project of The Faith and Beliefs of "Nonbelievers," an international team of sociologists, theologians, and philosophers explores the phenomenon of a globally growing segment of people who break with any form of organized religion. Sociologists call these people "nones." This segment has proven to be very diverse and has been understudied and under-reflected upon, especially in the post-communist countries of Central and Eastern Europe. The purpose of the book is to provide religious and public leaders and opinion-makers with tools to better comprehend the current changes in religiosity and overcome the prejudices between believers and nonbelievers"-- Provided by publisher.
